An outhouse is a small structure, separate from a main building, which covers a toilet. This is typically either a pit latrine or a bucket toilet, but other forms of dry toilets may be encountered. The term may also be used to denote the toilet itself, not just the structure. Outhouses were in use in cities of developed countries well into the second half of the twentieth century. They are still common in rural areas and also in cities of developing countries. Outhouses that are covering pit lat

Joe on May 10, 2013 at 10:25 AM said: My grandmother's farmhouse had no indoor plumbing, only a trad outhouse. Likewise my nearby summer camp. Both outhouses were NOT pleasant, especially for a city kid. But they were tolerable. One was high-use - camp - the other low-volume. Both used a white powder always referred to as "lime".
