After researching for reviews online and feedback from families and friends, we decided to sign-up with K by Cunanan Catering (or KbyC for short). We attended two food tastings with KbyC before finalizing our menu. During the first time, we were served with their top picks from previous clients.

Supplier Review: K by Cunanan Catering - The Hands-on Groom

While Lime 88's pasta uses white sauce to offset the saltiness of the dried fish, K by Cunanan's pasta uses olive oil to complement the tuyo and to contain its flavor. You can still taste the tuyo from the noodles even if you haven't eaten the actual bits. The only downside is that the noodles can be too salty for some, but blame it on the tuyo.

This is the continuation of the previous post about my food tasting experience with K by Cunanan catering. This time around, I will concentrate on the food. Sort of mini-food review na rin. hehehe. Macy told me that for the initial food tasting, they will let the clients try their best sellers to help them decide which menu to choose.

Live...Laugh...Love: Initial Food Tasting at K By Cunanan ...

Once again, K by Cunanan makes dishes that are well-balanced. The coconut cream on top ever so slightly flavors the fish while you could still taste the fish. I'm not a fan of raw onions but the little bit of onions and the mango chunks in the dish help balance out the richness of the cream. Pasta:

1st Food Tasting : K by Cunanan This is a long overdue post(as usual), We scheduled our Food tasting with K by Cunanan last March 12, 2013 (we are on a holiday because of system maintenance). Me, Nana and my 2 bff Lhen & Roselle went to Ayala Heights in Quezon City at around 11am (in time for lunch) for our very first food tasting.

The road to 11.08.14: 1st Food Tasting : K by Cunanan

On December 4, 2014, Dx and I went to do our food tasting with K by Cunanan. Upon entering their gate, I already had a good feeling. Their place looked really legit, with tables set up, tiffany chairs, and chandeliers too. I loved the ambiance! And Winona, our contact person, was really nice and friendly....
